

NICK—MORE—MONEY

Colonel Donald J. Woolley, district game technician, recently returned from the rugged outdoor job of commanding a battalion of ski troops in the battle for Italy, is a great lover of hunting dogs. He owns a nice Springer spaniel pup and sends in an interesting note about Sheriff J. S. Dishmon's [sic] registered setter up in King George County.

Photo by Donald J. Woolley.

Nick is a registered English setter owned by King George County's Sheriff, J. S. Dishmon.

The Sheriff's dog, Nick-More-Money, is said to have had 150-200 birds killed over him each year for the past five seasons. Accounting for such success in this day of short game crops, overshooting and posted signs, is the dog's exceptional ability to find birds and his characteristic of barking while on point until the hunter approaches.

During the 1946 season a party of four killed eighteen from eight covies. Nick located seven of the eight. The Sheriff thinks a lot of Nick and we don't blame him.

Virginia Wildlife magazine, September 1946, p.20